

Let the light shine on saving energy

As we approach the shortest and darkest days of the year, it's a good time to remember that if every American home replaced just one light bulb with an ENERGY STAR® qualified bulb, it would prevent greenhouse gases equivalent to the emissions of more than 800,000 cars. Energy efficient light bulbs are available for a low rebated price from Silicon Valley Power, the Municipal Electric Utility.

The City is doing its part by using LED (light emitting diodes) bulbs in all of its traffic signals. The switch saves 80-90% of the energy that would have been used with standard bulbs. Another change to traffic signals is improving synchronized timing so that vehicles on major corridors do not have to stop as often. Vehicles are estimated to create more than 25% of air pollution, and they use more fuel and generate more emissions when they are stopped at a red light idling.
